

Basic Essay

Introduction

Start broad by introducing the subject, as if the audience knows very little about it. Begin to narrow down the introduction until you reach a thesis.

Thesis Statement

Body Paragraphs

Once you've written your thesis, move into the body of your paper. Let these different paragraphs trickle into each other, until you reach your conclusion. Use as many paragraphs as you need.

Now that you've reached your conclusion, your reader should be equipped with a different perspective. In light of this, you can speak to them as if they are now more educated. This should allow you to reiterate your thesis in an alternative way, but still holding to the same idea.

Conclusion